

Names of Faculty/Staff: Dr. Pauline Nasesia Ndoro

Designation/Rank: Lecturer of Communication

Laikipia University: School of Humanities and Development Studies

Email: pndoro@laikipia.ac.ke,polly_ndoro@yahoo.co.uk

Educational Background:

PhD: Communication, University of South Africa

MA: Communication, Wheaton, Illinois, USA

B.Ed: (Honours) Kenyatta University

Brief auto-biography of the Faculty/Staff

Dr. Pauline Nasesia Ndoro began her academic career as a Secondary School and College Tutor of English, Literature in English, and communication skills in Kenya. She attended Wheaton College. Upon receiving an M.A degree in Communication, she became an Assistant lecturer at Egerton University, Kenya, where she taught Academic Communication Skills to freshmen and developed teaching materials and was later promoted to Lecturer position to teach communication courses. She also enrolled for her doctoral degree in 2004 in the Communication Science department of the University of South Africa. She was chairperson of the Literary and Communication Studies department of Laikipia University from 2013 to January 2016.

Previous Posts

1993 – : Lecturer: Laikipia University, Nyahururu, Kenya

1990 –1993: Assistant Lecturer. Egerton University, Njoro, Kenya.

1988-1990; College Tutor, Laikipia Teachers College, Teachers Service Commission, Kenya

1986 – 1987 August: Secondary School Teacher, Teachers Service Commission

Manuscripts submitted for publication

1. Low levels of knowledge hinder Samburu women from protecting themselves from HIV/AIDS----African Journal of Communication.
2. A paradigm shift in the way HIV/AIDS interventions are designed and implemented to more contextualized, cultural sensitive and gender sensitive messages. African Communication Research.
3. Communication Skills manual for Odel, Laikipia University.

Research Interests

Communication Skills, communication and culture, gender, organizational communication